Despatch from London Says British Experts Believe the Vladivostok Squadron Is Attempting to Reach Port Arthur and Help Free the Fleet that Is Bottled in Harbor.

BIG GUNS ROAR FROM FORTS AND SHIPS IN AN EIGHT-HOUR BATTLE.

In the Midst of a Howling Storm the Japanese Fleet Again Attacks Russian Stronghold and from Midnight Until 8 O'Clock To-Day Tremendous Firing Continues.

LONDON, March 10 .- Does the long continued absence of news concerning the Vladivostok fleet indicate that Russia has planned a coup that will astonish the world? This is the question that English experts are asking, and some of them are disposed to answer it in the affirmative.

No authentic news of the Vladivostok fleet has been received since Feb. 29. On that date the four tine ships comprising this division of the Russian Navy are believed to have steamed out of Vladivostok Harbor. and set a course down the Sea of Japan.

The war experts figure that there is a possibility that the commander of the fleet has succeeded in bringing it to within striking distance of Port arthur with the intention of attacking and destroying the transports carrying Japanese troops to Corea and Manchuria. Finally the news from Russian sources that the Retzivan and other Russian warships which were injured have been repaired leadts to the supposition that the Vladivostok vessels may be waiting the right moment when a Japanese attack upon Port Arthur would enable them to come thirty years was rector of St. Bar- up on the flank of the attacking vessels and aid in allowing the vessels in Port Arthur to steam out to the open sea in the resulting confusion.
